2.a.Agent reported orally: that he had heard from Erdmann concerning his housing situation. I told him that there was 1,000 DM available and did he think that that would be enough. He stated that he thought that would be not enough for even the meanest type of dwelling. At this point he mentioned that had he had the 2,000 DM that Erdmann asked about in a telegram, the situation would have been taken care of completely. However, now the situation was no better than before, since the chance of having a house for 2,000 DM had gone by. Agent states that he wishes to God that he was through with this rotten mess and would be glad to see the end of it. In reply to a direct question by Geleng. Agent states that he felt that Erdmann was a very excellent man to have in a radio operation and that he would hate to lose him. One was a first that the mould hate to lose him.

It the should be stated, however, here, that Halpick has just had a security check made on him and is afraid that he may be compromised by this very sloppy method of operation. It may also be stated here that Klein, as reported earlier, had a very poorly organized investigation carried out upon him although he has not stated any great misgivings.
 - f. Agent stated in reply to a direct question that he only sum the men in the North when it was necessary or approximately each three to four months.
 - g. RNMCOSEY reports that he has a chance, at this point, due to the new political situation in Germany, to set up a national resistance organization with one General KUMH, former commander of the Prince Eugen Division, as nominal and figurative head. He states that this organization would be run on a very small amount of money with himself as advisor and general contact man to an american Case Officer. Agent states this group can be cut out to the highest possible degree due to the fact that he would have 3 section chiefs in Germany, Worth, Middle, and South, and a possible section in Berlin. Under these 4 regional leaders would come a set of sub-regional leaders who would in turn recruit their own groups for action in time of war. Agent made a very interesting comment concerning former Werewolf caches; stating that he and his friends know the exact whereabouts now of many caches which were laid down in 1965 for possible use by this resistance group. In reply to direct question he stated that he was not sure about the quality of the ammunition after this many years, however, he was sure about the usability of the weapons themselves. He states that in West Berlin today there is a very big cache of arms, ammunition and food-stuffs which was laid down two months before the capitulation in a walled-up vacuum-proof cellar and which he believes could be used now or when the time became necessary. Case Efficer reports this interesting bit of repartes only for possible future use. In reply to a question, he states that the reason these people have not come out for any group or groups before was because of the insecure political situation. However, at this point, Agent feels that the political situation has crystallized to the extent that many former fence-sitters now see clearly that they must become a partner of the US if Communism and Russian exploitation is to be stopped in Europe.

h. In reply to another direct question, Agent stated that one Gerhard Schacht, Munich chief of the Blank Office, a friend since 1935, met him in a personal conversation and asked him if he was "working for the Americans". RHHOOSET stated to Schanhti. that that was not so, that he did not work for the Americans". Agent stated to me personally that what he does do is "work with the Americans", a Schacht also asked Agent if he had anything to do with the Deutsche Heinat Schutze.
